PROVINCIAL PROFILE

Sarah Rabinowitz

Mrs Sarah Rabinowitz, widow of Rabbi Reuben Rabinowitz, for 40 years ran of the Birmingham Central Synagogue, is one of the few women who have been honoured by the Queen specifically for work on behalf of her local Jewish community.

She was appointed an MBE in the 1971 New Year Honours List as chairman of the Central Synagogue ladies' guild and thus her outstanding services to the entire Birmingham Jewish community for over 40 years was recognised.

For her innumerable good deeds among the poor, the destitute and the underprivileged, Mrs Rabinowitz has been closely associated with almost every welfare organisation in the city.

Born into a rabbinic family in the hard times of pre-revolution Russia, Sarah Rabinowitz frequently experienced hunger and deprivation. Self-reliance and strength of character were necessary for survival in those times. As a young girl, together with her parents and family, she fled to this country in 1923. The following year she married Reuben Rabinowitz. After six years in Llanelli the couple settled in Birmingham in 1929.

During the Second World War she devoted herself to helping the refugees from Nazi Europe who came to Birmingham, to the Jewish women of many nationalities who were stationed in the vicinity and to Birmingham's Jewish children who were evacuated. When, in fact, the 100 children from the Birmingham Hebrew School were evacuated to Coalville in Leicestershire she, almost single-handed, ensured that the children lived in a complete Jewish atmosphere and enabled them to enjoy a kosher diet.

Most of her work is done unobtrusively and even anonymously but over the years countless local families have reason to be grateful to her. She has made it her business to look out and help the old, the sick, the poor and the less fortunate.

Full Extent

Together with her late husband, Mrs. Rabinowitz helped to found the Birmingham and Midland Jewish Blind Society and helped
